3,000 year-old tribe discovered in China

A group of apparently ancient, yellow-haired people has been unearthed in China.

They lived during the Dongjia period in Henan Province, the period when Troy was in existence.

According to a report in Chinese state-run newspaper Global Times: An apparent human fossil found in Guizhou Province, southwestern China, could be more than 3,000 years old. The remains of the male were unearthed in a cave in Muyun County, Guizhou Province. The fossil's age has been estimated to be around the Dongjia Culture (c. 2106-1900 BC). Though the Chinese government has yet to officially announce the discovery, local experts are quite certain of the discovery. Daily Mail reports: A Chinese government archaeologist has hailed the discovery of a fossil believed to be more than 3,000 years old as a "breakthrough in human archaeology". The skeletal remains, believed to belong to an early "Dongjia Man" or ancient human from China's Neolithic period, were discovered in a cave in the region of MUYUN county, in western Guizhou province. Both the fossil's age and the skeletal remains match the era and to the culture of the Dongjia Man, which included the Zhuang and Chen people. "This is a breakthrough in human archaeology," said Mr. Zhao Hongjie, from the Henan University of Science and Technology, adding that the remains could potentially provide new insights into the evolution of the first humans.

Mr. Zhao said that the discovery may shed new light on the origins of the Han and Chu people, who
